"HIDDEN BELOW, Seeking Out Ancient Primeval Subterranean Inhabitants" Has Professor Hegg become a collector of Exotics?

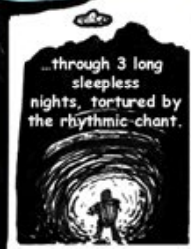

In the deepest regions of the Atlantic along the trench off the island of Bimini, a deep dwelling submersible parks near a large cavern on the bottom of the ocean floor.

The bottom hatch door of the submersible pops open as the steely girth of a lone diver emerges in a frothy stream of vibrant bubbles.

A short distance from the drop off point the deep diver detects a living entity on his wrist screen module. Before him is the cavern he has been seeking with the coordinates, he has heard in his mind over and over again...

...through 3 long sleepless nights, tortured by the rhythmic chant.

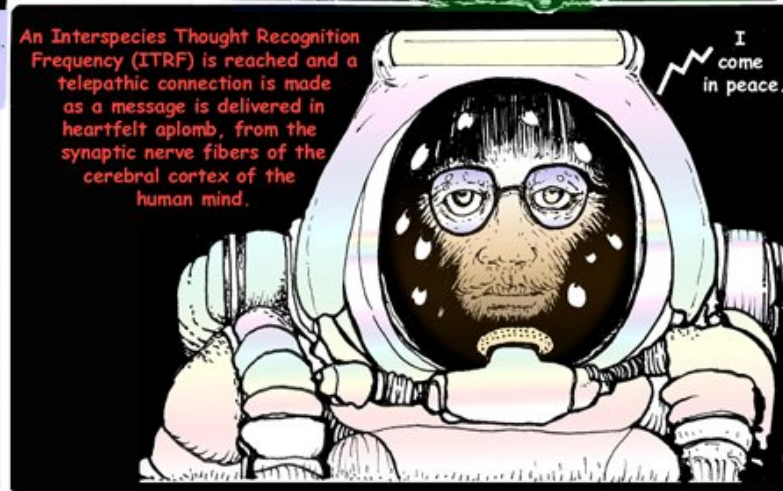

The researcher of exotics which have thought long extinct prays that he has found the lair of an antediluvian species, of antiquated background far beyond any thing described in today's books on paleontology.

Four hours of ceaseless walking in the crushing weight of the watery depths of this lost cavern, the diver finally comes to that which he has sought...

...there, now before him, in the inky darkness.

An Interspecies Thought Recognition Frequency (ITRF) is reached and a telepathic connection is made as a message is delivered in heartfelt aplomb, from the synaptic nerve fibers of the cerebral cortex of the human mind.

I come in peace.
